Book 1:

The Book Thief by Markus Zusak

“She said it out loud, the words distributed into a room that was full of cold air and books. Books everywhere! Each wall was armed with overcrowded yet immaculate shelving. It was barely possible to see paintwork. There were all different styles and sizes of lettering on the spines of the black, the red, the grey, the every-coloured books. It was one of the most beautiful things Liesel Meminger had ever seen. With wonder, she smiled. That such a room existed!”

Book 2: Life of Pi by Yann Martel

“My greatest wish -- other than salvation -- was to have a book. A long book with a never-ending story. One I could read again and again, with new eyes and a fresh understanding each time.”

Book 3:

The House of Silk by Anthony Horowitz

“We had almost reached the gate when a black bird flew overhead, not a raven but a crow. I followed it with my eye and as I did so, something made me turn and glance back at the hall. And there was Lord Ravenshaw, standing at the window, watching us leave. His hands were on his hips and his round, bulging eyes were fixed on us. And although I could have been mistaken for we were some distance away, his face, it seemed to me, was filled with hate.”

Book 4: Rose, Interrupted by Patrice Lawrence

“When my parents were kicked out, we weren’t allowed to see anybody there ever again. Pilgrims in the street would cross over to avoid us. These were children I’d played with since I was a baby and now they were being told to look away from me. We stopped existing. We were like ghosts. No, worse, we were nothings.”
